Get a lawn that you can be proud of

Tall Fescue grows long roots to access water deep in the soil profile. Kentucky Bluegrass has rhizomes that allow it to naturally spread to fill in bare areas. For best results, use Scott's® Turf Builder® Lawn Food to feed and strengthen your lawn to help protect against future problems. It builds strong roots and improves the lawn's ability to absorb water and nutrients versus an unfed lawn.

For best results, plant new seed in the Spring or Fall when daily average soil temperatures are consistently between 60°F and 75°F, or air temperatures are between 65°F and 85°F.

WATER IS KEY TO SEEDING SUCCESS

Follow these steps when watering newly planted grass seed:

- 1 Water daily or as needed to keep the soil surface moist.
- 2 Continue this frequent watering pattern for at least 3 weeks or until seedlings reach 2 inches in height.
- 3 Use auto-timers or other reminders to help ensure no essential waterings are missed.
