

Instructions care for Mango wood:

Mango wood is fairly water-resistant, it is advised that you do not clean it by applying water to the surface and removing with a sponge. Wipe down periodically with a slightly damp or dry dust cloth that contains no heavy stitching, in order to avoid scratches

Be wary of liquids

If you spill a large amount of liquid on the surface it is best to wipe it up with a dry cloth immediately.

Avoid exposing the mango wood furniture to alcohol, deodorants, perfumes, nail paints as any exposure may harm the finish of the wood.

Don't place hot objects directly on the wood furniture, always use mats and coasters.

Keep out of direct sunlight

If your room is exposed to large chunks of sunlight, ensure that your mango wood piece is in a shady section, which won't hit the sunlight or get too hot. Over many years of being too exposed to sunlight, your piece could be at risk of fading as with all wood products.

Cleaning

Try not to use a damp cloth to wipe the surface of your mango wood, as this may cause discolouration. To clean effectively, use a dry cloth without any polish or solution to prevent the risk of removing the natural wax. However, using a tiny bit of beeswax would be ideal to clean the surface properly, as well as adding to the woods protective coating.